Relationship Overview

Helix has been a Tier 1 coverage client since 2021. The firm acted as joint bookrunner on Helix's $460M follow-on offering (March 2024) and as sole financial advisor on the Ventrexa royalty monetization discussions (2025, not executed). Estimated 3-year wallet paid to the firm: $14.2M; our wallet share is ~22%, ranking #2 behind a bulge-bracket competitor.

Key Client Contacts

Name	Title	Relationship notes
Dr. Elena Marsh	Chief Executive Officer	Former Big Pharma R&D head; data-driven, dislikes long decks

Grace Lindqvist	VP Corporate Development	Leads licensing process; responsive on email
Arjun Mehta	Board Member (Audit Chair)	Ex-investment banker; sceptical of convertible pricing

Recent Interactions (Call Reports)

12 Sep 2026 – CFO lunch: Whitfield asked for an update on the converts market for biotech issuers and indicative terms for a $500–750M 5-year convert with capped call. He noted the board wants to be 'ready to go the day after data'.

03 Oct 2026 – Corp Dev call: Lindqvist confirmed inbound interest from two Japanese pharma companies for HLX-201 Asian rights. She asked whether the firm could run a targeted process in Q4 2026.

21 Oct 2026 – CEO meeting at conference: Dr. Marsh was frustrated by recent short-seller commentary on HLX-201 liver safety. Recommend we avoid discussing the short report unless she raises it.

Open Opportunities

Opportunity	Est. size	Est. fee	Probability	Timing

HLX-201 Asia licensing advisory	$150–250M upfront	$4–6M	40%	Q4 2026–Q1 2027
Capped call / hedging	n/a	$1–2M	50%	With convert

Suggested Talking Points for Next Meeting

1) Bring a one-page convert term sheet with pricing scenarios at current vol (pre- and post-data). 2) Propose a 'shadow' licensing process starting December so a deal can be signed shortly after data. 3) Reference our recent biotech convert execution experience. 4) Sensitivity: CFO is cost-conscious on fees; the 2024 follow-on gross spread was negotiated down to 4.25%.
